City Is Studying Car Sharing

by Sandy Smith

Car sharing in Greenbelt came a bit closer with the Greenbelt City Council's encouragement of city staff to pursue the program. This action followed a presentation at the November 26 meeting by Zipcar, one of the companies offering car sharing services in the Washington metropolitan area.

Long a council interest and considered essential to improving parking congestion at Green Ridge House and other areas of the city, car-sharing was the topic of a lengthy discussion at the council meeting. Bill Edwards, City Director for Zipcar, described the operations of the car-sharing company, which started in Boston but is now expanding into other areas. The company offers an alternative to car ownership by providing subscribers with access to a car on a reserved basis.

Zipcar charges a member deposit, application and annual fees, as well as a user fee based on length of use and mileage. Zipcar's fleet of cars includes VW Beetles, Golfs and Jettas. Zipcar's reservation system is computerized and subscribers unlock their vehicles with a smart card, which also records the time the car was returned. Zipcar pays for gas and insurance, takes care of car maintenance, and parks the cars in convenient locations. Subscribers can reserve a car for any length of time and are responsible for returning it to the same reserved location.

Edwards stressed the ease of Zipcar's reservation system and a high level of customer satisfaction. He called Zipcar "the Microsoft of car sharing" because of its advanced technology and reservation system, which virtually guarantees subscribers that a car will be available. In addition to on-line reservations, there is a voice-activated system and a member services representative for those who want the personal touch, he explained.

Community Planner Terri Hruby, who has led the research into car sharing, also presented information to council on another firm, Flexcar, also in this area but with a different method of operation. Flexcar was recently awarded a contract to provide car-sharing vehicles at 20 metro stations, including the Greenbelt metro station, within the next 12 months. Flexcar has lower user fees and minimal up-front costs, she indicated, but Zipcar has an established presence already in the area and an excellent track record.

More Research

Council urged staff to move ahead and determine what needs to be done to bring car sharing to Greenbelt while not approving a specific plan or vendor at this time. Staff will be continuing its research and discussions with the car-sharing companies and will return to council with a final plan for approval. Hruby said that the city was eager to get started but that it was critical to determine the level of interest in Greenbelt for car sharing.

For example, Zipcar usually requires a minimum of 15-20 subscribers to set up operations in a specific community, but Edwards indicated that if the "demographics look right" in terms of population density and other factors, the company will work with government, apartments or condo management to get a program started. He said that there was no "typical" car sharing patron and that their subscribers ranged from 21, the minimum age, to 65 plus and included singles and families, those without a car and those who need a second car from time to time.

Hruby said that some of the next steps would be talking with citizens and providing them with information on car sharing, determining levels of interest and need, and comparing options. She expected that the first efforts will be to establish car sharing services for Green Ridge House.

Credit Union Is Robbed; Generous Joe's Also Hit

by Barbara Bonham Young

Credit Union

"He was very quiet about it," Credit Union Manager Cindy Comproni told the News Review, "and no one knew what had happened until after he left," she said of the robber who escaped with money on Monday, December 3 at about 1:50 p.m. The Greenbelt Federal Credit Union had been robbed previously around noon-time last September 6.

The current suspect, described as a white male in his 30s, with brown eyes, 5'5" and thin, wore a red hooded sweat shirt. He passed a note to a teller demanding money and saying he had a gun. None, however, was displayed, Comproni said. After receiving money, she added, the man walked out of the Credit Union past the New Deal Café toward the parking lot.

Police and an FBI agent (because the organization is federally insured), responded to the scene and the Credit Union closed for the day. "We've been here since 1937 and have never had a problem until recently," Comproni said. "We're in the process of installing cameras and are discussing other avenues of beefing up security, because we want our members to feel safe."

Comproni praised residents of the community and police officers for their thoughtfulness and understanding following the previous robbery. Members of both groups stopped in several times "to check on us." However, she mentioned that after the previous robbery, the FBI agent assigned to the case was pulled off to as-

by Sandy Smith

City Council decided to determine the benefits and limitations of an Arts and Entertainment District in the city before applying for this state designation, and to set city priorities for the 2002 legislative session at its regular meeting on November 26.

Mayor Judith Davis and councilmembers expressed tentative interest in having an arts and entertainment district designated within the city of Greenbelt. They felt, however, that too little was known about the potential downsides as well as benefits of this state designation to go forward with an application at this time. This wait-and-see attitude was consistent with recommendations from Nicole DeWald, arts coordinator, and David Moran, assistant to the city manager, who had researched this program and developed a plan and time table for possibly applying next year.

Recently passed legislation to create Arts and Entertainment Districts is intended to stimulate arts in a community by providing property tax credits, economic development assistance for arts and entertainment projects, and exemptions from local admission and amusement taxes. The legislation is intended primarily for areas in need of economic development or revitalization under the State's Smart Growth Program.

Council decided to send a letter to the Secretary of the Department of Business and Economic Development expressing interest in the program and the intention of waiting until next year before filing an application. In the meantime the city will enlist and involve key stakeholders, carefully evaluate the benefits and develop vision and management plans, as required under the program. Davis emphasized that the economic impact such as loss of tax revenue has to be carefully considered.

Councilmember Tom White urged the city to develop a vision plan for the arts regardless of whether the city seeks this official designation. Councilmember Alan Turnbull congratulated DeWald for her careful review of the pros and cons of a program which for an arts advocate might be considered "Mom and apple pie." DeWald said that it might be possible to customize something for Greenbelt under the program, to pick and choose the elements which would be most advantageous for the city.

Additional state funding for the expansion of the Springhill Lake Recreation Center was the unanimous top priority of councilmembers for the 2002 legislative session. As City Manager Michael McLaughlin suggested, council felt it was best to focus on a limited number of critical priorities. Other priorities at the state level are to request full planning and zoning authority for the city and to continue opposition to funding of Beltway ramps

News Review Needs Your Support

The Greenbelt News Review begins its 65th year of publication this week – and we'd like very much to keep on going to 100, at least. But due to the recent loss of our affordable composition shop at Chesapeake Publishing, the paper is now losing money every week. We need the support of our faithful readers, who realize that without their volunteer-run paper – miraculously still in existence – Greenbelt's much-prized sense of community would begin to erode quickly. We don't want that to happen. Last week we printed an article kicking off the News Review fund drive and there is a contribution form below. Please be generous, because we need to pay our bills while we search for a permanent solution.

Theme at Magnolia "United We Stand"

by Mary Moien

October 31 was special at Magnolia Elementary School this year. A patriotic theme replaced the usual Halloween costumes. All 744 children at the school took part in a project of singing and marching. The students, dressed by class in red, white or blue marched with flags around the playing field forming the outline of the United States. Fifth and sixth grade peer mediators held the banner "United We Stand" and other children were dressed in their native costumes. Several parents were on hand, some also in native dress.

School counselor Wendy Deemer stated that the teachers and students decided to hold a special party this year, one that would "show our diversity" and how all are unified in one country. Deemer indicated that one-third of Magnolia students speak a language other than English as their first language. These students represent more than 30 different countries.

All students marched out of the school and took their places on the large outline of the United States that had been drawn in the grass. Many hand-held flags were waving. Then Principal Phyllis Gillens, dressed in bright red, led the students in the Pledge of Allegiance. Following that, each class sang a patriotic song, including "You're a Grand Old Flag," "Sing Out for My Country," "Fifty Nifty," and "If I had a Hammer." The students in foreign dress passed by in a Parade of Nations. The program ended with all students singing "This Land Is Your Land."

Choral Society Gives Top Notch Program

by Nick Mydra

Last Sunday I had to work so I didn't get to the Prince George's Choral Society's annual Christmas Concert until well into the second half of the program. Doing a review would be out of the question. Instead I have an observation. The Christmas Concert was performed at Holy Cross Lutheran Church. It had the familiar Christmas songs, and for some the audience were invited to sing along. Vocal soloists and a brass quintet along with resident organist Stephen Pruitt rounded out the participants.

What a wonderful musical organization. Such a gem to be discovered in P.G. County. With a full house last Sunday a lot of other people know of them, too. Musically they are top notch. You can thank Phillip Hale their music director. Having a chance to talk to him about the organization gives you a sense that he knows where he wants to take the Choral Society and broaden and expand their music base.

You also get a lot of bang for your buck. Sunday you only needed 10 of them. I didn't really realize how many people were at the concert until I got in the after-concert buffet line to try some of the food the Choral Society offered the audience. It was a veeery long line. As a food critic I would give a thumbs up.

Again, what a gem of a musical organization. In case you're interested, their next concert will be in February.

Condolences to Jon Bell and his wife, Judy, on the death of his father, Phillip Bell, of Concord, New Hampshire.

Council was deliberating priorities and strategies in preparation for the annual legislative dinner on December 13 with Greenbelt's state delegation and the county council representative. There was some debate on the relative importance of speed monitoring cameras and the theater bond bill, the latter already drafted by state Senator Leo Green. Councilmember Rodney Roberts supported the speed monitoring cameras as a safety issue; Councilmember Edward Putens thought it important but not the top priority and one that he would classify as "other issues" to bring to Greenbelt's legislative representatives. White spoke in support of the theater bond bill and ultimately the others, with the exception of Roberts, thought that the theater bond issue should also be included in the top priorities. White, Putens and Turnbull would lower in importance the speed monitoring cameras to see first how effective the red light camera program is. Turnbull hoped that there would not be a steady stream of income from tickets for those who run red lights but that behavioral changes and safer driving would be the outcome. White and Roberts were also concerned about the adequacy of school facilities, especially cafeterias and restroom areas. Turnbull suggested that the Jaeger tract funding also be addressed in the meeting, both as a state and county agenda item.

Boards and Committees

For the most part, councilmembers agreed to continue their assignments and discussed their individual responsibilities as liaisons to various city and regional boards and committees. Turnbull and then others mentioned that often they could not attend the many city committee meetings but tried to fulfill their role as liaisons by reading minutes, keeping informed, talking with members, and working electronically when possible.

Recycling Awards

Cindy Murray, Public Works staff liaison to the Recycling and Environment Advisory Committee, announced the winners of the recycling contest. The residential winners - based on neatness and appropriateness of sorting - were Julia and Eugene Stratchko of Greenhill Road, Kathy and James Kirby of Laurel Hill Road, Kathy and Charles Kendall of Ridge Road and Bruce Kuhl, also of Ridge Road. They received new blue recycling bins identifying them as contest winners and the usual T-shirts, but this time made of recycled fabric.

Organizational winners included Greenbelt Homes, Inc., which established an office recycling program under the leadership of Joan Krob, and Eleanor Roosevelt High School's Junior Civitans and Ecology Clubs. Julia Eichhorst, GHI board president, and ERHS vice principal and club members accepted those awards.

Murray also reported on a very successful Lake Park cleanup which netted over 40 bags of trash, from bottles to tennis balls. Davis offered that she had participated in the event and had located the park quicksand. She expressed thanks to all the citizens who participated and to the Recycling and Environment Advisory Committee. The recent electronics recycling day generated over 3,000 pounds of equipment and Murray indicated that another day will be scheduled in January for people to recycle their old computers after the holidays.

Flag Football Game Supports Firefighters

by Larry Hilliard

This year's Pete Labukas Tootsie Roll Bowl Flag Football Game was held on November 12 at Braden Field. The Tootsie Roll Bowl is hosted by St. Hugh's Knights of Columbus, the St. Hugh's Catholic Youth Organization, and the St. Hugh's Office of Youth Ministry.

About 60 young people participated and raised funds to support firefighters who were affected by the recent tornado and the events of September 11. Robyn Dwyer of the Maryland Fire and Rescue Institute was awarded the game ball by Liz and Kathy Labukas, daughters of Pete - the first Tootsie Roll Bowl chairman.

Robin Dwyer receives the game ball from Liz and Kathy Labukas in recognition of her leadership of the St. Hugh's Youth Group.

With help from teammates Ashleigh Carter and Evan Real, Wesley Hilliard breaks for the goal line with Annie Lemieux, Mark Stenson and Eric Didion in hot pursuit.

Officials Joe Griffith and Fred Meyer of the Knights of Columbus were the enforcers.

Generous Joe's

At about 5 a.m. on Sunday, December 2, someone smashed the glass door of the restaurant and took money. According to MPO George Mathews, witnesses said they saw possible suspects leave and get in to a small brown four-door car. Mathews urged anyone with information to contact police by calling 301-507-6530. No name need be given.

Merchants

Comproni noted initiatives mentioned at a recent meeting of Roosevelt Center merchants that was held with the city council and police. In a handout prepared for distribution at the meeting, possibilities under consideration for improving security included: 1) undertaking a public information campaign and preparing newspaper articles, 2) posting a code of conduct for those using the Center, 3) increasing police and code enforcement officer presence, 4) adding lights and/or increasing wattage, and 5) "moving benches to the half-circle across Centerway."

Patrol of the Center for at least two hours per day was also mentioned, Comproni said. Mathews told the News Review on December 4 that patrolling has already been "significantly" increased.

Reacting to recent Roosevelt Center crimes, Chef Louis Parker,

"Chef Lou," said he was disappointed that no one from the police department informed merchants of recent occurrences. "When I came in Monday morning, I had to ask Joe [of Generous Joe's] what had happened," he said.

Leonard Wallace of Realty One said in reaction, "It seems like all we have are meetings, and nothing changes. In the past two weeks, we've had a stabbing, a car chase, a robbery, and a burglary. . . . police have tried to make more of a presence in the Center, but we still don't see the problems going away — if anything, they're escalating. Residents don't feel comfortable coming to the Center."

The Department is offering a reward of up to $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter. Citizens may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 301-507-6522. Victims of the theft of lawn ornaments, tools, lawn mowers, etc., should contact Criminal Investigations at 301-507-6530. Some items have been recovered and police would like to return them to owners.

Kindergarten Choices Explained by Panel

by Amy S. Hansen

Public and private schools from the Greenbelt area presented philosophies and logistics when answering the question: What comes after nursery school? The public symposium, held last Wednesday night in the Greenbelt Library, was sponsored by Greenbelt Nursery School and aimed at helping parents choose from the array of possible kindergartens in the area.

Attending were representatives from Prince George's County magnet programs, College Park Cooperative Nursery School and Kindergarten, Concordia Lutheran School, Paint Branch Montessori, Holy Redeemer, and Friends School in College Park.

The public magnet schools have 16 programs in 55 locations, explained Jennifer Bryant, the magnet school recruitment specialist. "The magnet programs are very popular," said Bryant. "They receive 15,000 applications for 1,400 spots. The French Immersion and Montessori programs require students to enter at kindergarten or before." Linda Massey, a teacher in the magnet Montessori program, explained her program's philosophy: "Children are natural learners. If we design a program that is naturally interesting, they will learn."

Lisa Reaves of Concordia Lutheran School in Adelphi said her school offers two kindergarten classes, with an average of one teacher for every 10 students. The students can attend for a half or full day of school. And while it is a Lutheran school and the children do learn Bible stories, only 20 percent of the student body are Lutheran.

Paint Branch Montessori, like the public Montessori program, works with mixed age groups of children. "We believe the children learn best from each other," said Patty Barshay. The children stay with the same teacher for up to three years and are encouraged to learn at their own speed. "We don't believe that what they learn is tied to their age."

College Park Nursery School and Kindergarten was the smallest school represented, with a kindergarten class of only eight. "We can take up to 12," said kindergarten teacher Clare Beth. She works the curriculum around the students, focusing on reading, writing, science and math, often through projects. "Our dinosaur program was supposed to be two weeks, but the kids were so interested it went on for five." Classes are half days.

Holy Redeemer, a Catholic School in Berwyn, has two kindergarten classes of 16 children each. The classes include literature, hands-on math, writing, and computer labs. The kindergartners are also involved in such school activities as student council, and they have buddy classmates from the older classes, explained kindergarten teacher Li-ane Sayers.

Friends School in College Park has a total of 140 kids in K through 8, said Susie Baker-Lapp, a third grade teacher there. The school's goal, she said, "is to listen to where the kids are and try to take them to the next level. We want to grow independent learners."

For more information about any of these programs, call the schools.

New Deal Celebrates Fair Trade Action Day

The choice of coffee can make a world of positive difference for poor farmers. That choice can be made right here in Greenbelt, at the New Deal Café.

Coffee, the planet's second largest traded commodity after oil, is at its lowest price in history. While coffee companies have profited from a glut in coffee supplies, coffee farmers' wages have plummeted. Prices are so low that for many farmers, it costs more to pick the beans than the beans are worth.

Fairly traded coffee guarantees a minimum price per pound to farmers. Grass roots organizations have come together to proclaim Saturday, December 8, as a Fair Trade Coffee Day of Action. The groups are asking consumers to make a difference on December 8 by purchasing fair trade coffee in their local stores and cafes.

Farmers in Central America have been particularly hard hit by this price crisis.

The World Food Program estimates that 150,000 refugees have been created as a result of the coffee crisis. Farmers and their families not only face unemployment, displacement, and land-seizure, but risk starvation and death, according to Deborah James of Global Exchange, a Berkeley human rights organization.

"The good news is that consumers have the power to make a difference in farmers' lives now. If we act together to educate consumers and promote organic Fair Trade Certified coffee, we can expand the desperately needed market for fair trade coffee and send a powerful message to the coffee industry that consumers demand coffee free from social and environmental exploitation," says James.

The New Deal offers coffee from Equal Exchange, a USA-based company dedicated to the improvement of coffee farmers' lives.

Fair Trade coffee is also available at another Greenbelt cooperative – the Greenbelt Co-op grocery store.

For information about the international coffee crisis and Fair Trade Coffee Day of Action, visit the web at www.transfairusa.org, www.globalexchange.org/economy/coffee, or www.serv.org.

Council and State Discuss Highways, Sidewalks, Signs

by Virginia Beauchamp

Several recurring or newly defined problems involving the road system within Greenbelt surfaced at the recent stakeholders meeting on November 19 between the Greenbelt City Council and representatives of the State Highway Administration (SHA). In a follow-up letter to District Engineer Charlie Watkins dated November 26, City Manager Mike McLaughlin summarized these areas of concern.

Three involve Greenbelt Road: 1) crumbling sidewalks near the entrance to Greenway Center, 2) the need for a crosswalk between Southway and the entrance to Greenway Center, and 3) an often-repeated request for a stop light at Lakecrest Drive and Greenbelt Road. As McLaughlin conceded, the last item "has been studied many times," yet the intersection has also been the site of "numerous" accidents. Would SHA be willing to look at it once again?

Replacing the crumbling sidewalks would, of course, enhance pedestrian safety for those heading for Greenway Center. McLaughlin suggested this problem might be corrected with the state's retrofit program, with or without a municipal match in funding. In addition, anyone walking to Greenway Center would naturally seek the walkway on the south side of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway bridge, whether coming from Southway or from further west along Greenbelt Road. He hoped a crosswalk could be designated.

Marriott Sign

Another long-standing problem, the placement of a large sign on Kenilworth Avenue just before Ivy Lane, confuses motorists, McLaughlin's letter pointed out. Advertising the left turn for the Marriott Hotel, it is placed too far south, as councilmembers noted at the meeting.

Motorists turning from the Beltway and seeing the sign, suppose they are to turn immediately; thus dozens every day find themselves instead in the parking lot for the SHA building. Besides making a sudden turn and endangering themselves with moving traffic, some of these confused drivers recognize their error just in time to veer back into traffic for the intended second left, into Ivy Lane.

Watkins agreed with council's assessment of the sign's confusing placement. Beside its possible effect on the movement of traffic, Watkins said, the frequent turning of cars into their own parking lot is a nuisance to the agency, if not a danger to those who legitimately use the lot. He agreed to seek permission from the Marriott corporation to have the sign moved further north.

Metro Access Drive

Since the Greenbelt Metro Station parking lot has been filling up daily as Metro's business has boomed, "significant backups" during the evening rush hour have been occurring, McLaughlin's letter says. Total capacity for the lot is 3500 cars, yet the only traffic control is a stop sign on Metro Access Drive to Cherrywood Lane. The latter is free-flowing in both directions. McLaughlin requested an analysis of the situation and recommendations for possible solutions, such as a signal or a traffic circle.

Noise Barriers

In an earlier letter of November 21, also directed to Watkins, McLaughlin made a formal request for noise barriers to be installed at several locations along the Beltway within the corporate limits of Greenbelt. Included in the letter was a map of the city with the entire stretch of the Beltway highlighted.

One potential problem in finding a solution, McLaughlin's letter said, is the topography of the Boxwood subdivision. Since it is built on a steep uphill slope, the positioning of sound walls may impact their effectiveness.

Flu Shots Offered For At-Risk People

As a free public service, Laurel Regional Hospital will offer flu shots on Friday, December 14, to persons who risk serious illness from flu; this includes senior citizens and persons with chronic respiratory conditions. The inoculations will be given on a first-come first-serve basis from 4 to 6 p.m. in the J. Russell Jones Room.

No appointments will be made. Cost for the vaccine has been underwritten by the hospital as part of its commitment to provide illness prevention services. Call 301-497-7914.

Impact of Holidays On Mentally Ill Cited

The National Association of the Mentally Ill (NAMI) is sponsoring a workshop Thursday, Dec. 13, 7 to 9 p.m. on the topic "Impact of the Holiday Season on Persons with Mental Illness." The speaker is Agnes Hatfield, Ph.D. The holiday celebration includes Jennifer Polhemus, former administrator of NAMI-Prince George's County, presenting selected poems from her Chapbook. The location is at NAMI's Prince George's County Community Police Resource Center at Landover Mall. Call 301-577-6026 or 301-322-1900.

NAMI Support Groups Meet

The National Association of the Mentally Ill (NAMI) holds monthly support group meetings the second Monday of the month in Bowie. The next meeting is December 10, 1 to 2:30 p.m. at the Senior Center Music Room, 14900 Healthcare Dr.

On the second Tuesday, December 11, 7 to 9 p.m., a family support group meeting will take place in New Carrollton at 6016 Princess Garden Parkway, in the Municipal Center multipurpose room. To learn more, call 301-577-6026 or 301-322-1900.
